After the ceremony the young couple went to Harrisburg in a cab and in trying to elude a crowd of friends who boarded a car in order to give them a royal send-off went to the Orpheum Theatre.

Quite enjoying the bill, they little thought they were caught, and were surprised indeed to be greeted with shouts of laughter and showers of rice in the lobby after the play. MURDER IN FIRST DEGREE

FOR GILBERT THE NEGRO WAITER WHO SHOT DAN L. K. MILLER

Drunkeness was Defense in Attempt to escape Conviction for First Degree Murder.

Leonidas W. Gilbert, the negro waiter, indicted for the murder of his employer, Daniel K. Miller, proprietor of the Hotel Dauphin, Harrisburg, on June 27, 1911, was placed on trial last week, before Judge McCarrell and the trial of the case occupied the greater part of the week before verdict was reached. Harry Miller, brother of the murdered man, was in court all the time seated near the district attorney.

As the case of the Commonweath was developed and Dr. George H. Kunkel was on the witness stand, the defense sprung a surprise that death was due to an organic disease. Dr. Kunkel had described the course of the three bullets, one in the right wrist, second near the left armpit, on the breast, and third and fatal one in the left breast. Death was declared to be due to gangrene caused by the entrance of the foreign missile in the left lung. Counsel for defendant sought upon cross-examination to have Dr. Kunkel admit that the hotel man had a pulmonary disease and that this organic affection was the cause of his death and not the bullet, but Dr. Kunkel would not admit the possibility of such a condition. He said that no disease existed in Miller's lungs, that they were in a healthy condition, and he was corroborated in this statement by other medical testimony.

Defense dropped the matter of some pulmonary disease and switched to the defense of intoxication, that he was too drunk to realize what he was doing. Witnesses were called to testify that Gilbert was drunk before the shooting occurred and Gilbert going on the stand claimed to have only a hazy recollection of the shooting saying he was "dead drunk." The counsel for the prisoner in their arguments to the jury contended that he was so drunk that he could not conceive the murder.

The officers arresting Gilbert after the offense declared he was cold sober, and testified to the following confession: "I shot Dan Miller because he made me mad. He kicked me down stairs. Here's how it all happened: A man came into the dining room and ordered of his supper. Going up to the kitchen I gave the cook his order, but before soon the customer got up and went out. On his way out he stopped and said to Mr. Miller: 'I'm in a hurry and I can't wait; your waiter's too slow.' Mr. Miller came to me; he asked why I hadn't waited on the man and I told him I couldn't serve a customer until his order was cooked. He told me to get out and then he kicked me down the back stairs. That made me mad."

"I left, going to the Lochiel Hotel. I got a drink of whiskey. At 10 o'clock I tried to borrow a pistol, but I couldn't, so I went down Market street till I came to a pawn shop. I bought a gun for a dollar and a quarter. Then I went back and demanded an explanation. "He wouldn't give me any, so I fired."

Gilbert started out with some nerve but lost it as the trial proceeded and toward the end was in a continuous cry and whine.

The jury was out four hours and took eight ballots, several jurors holding out for second degree murder, but all finally voting for guilty of murder in the first degree.

Work at Federal Building.

Work at the Federal Building began last week, the matter of the grade having been satisfactorily adjusted. Last week the supplies of sand, brick and stone were received and stored about the lot, and preparations were made to be prepared for the work as it advances.

William Hemler finished last week his work of ditching for the foundations, the trenches being about a foot deep and at the points where the piers go they are over two feet deep.

The contract for the concrete work has been awarded to Robert Wolf of York and he is on the ground with such machinery for the purpose as has never before been used in work of the kind about town and has been attracting much attention.

Rain has delayed the beginning of the concrete work as many of the trenches had water in them but work has been going on to eliminate this obstacle and it is expected to have work going rapidly forward on the concrete work and foundation walls which will be of brick and cement.

Parent Teachers' Association.

The Parent Teachers' meeting has been postponed on account of the Y. M. C. A. entertainment, from November 10th to Friday evening, November 17th. At that session there will be an election of officers. A good program has been planned.

Feist Convicted of Assaulting Girl.

Jacob G. Feist, the investment broker and promoter of Harrisburg, well known in this town and county through his work in promoting the development of the Peach Bottom slate quarries in York county, was convicted in the criminal courts of Harrisburg during the closing days of last month of criminally assaulting a 14 year old girl.

Judge W. Rush Gillan of Franklin county specially presided in the case. Margaret Irene Douglas, 14 years old, of Mechanicsburg, sobbed out her story of her alleged ruination by Feist and the interests of the defendant were guarded at every point by five lawyers. The trial lasted several days. The girl told of being employed as nurse girl for Feist's wife for two weeks. That her sister was employed at the same place and that on last May 22nd she went to see her sister and after she started home she met Feist in his yellow and black striped auto, who offered to take her to her car but she alleged she was carried out into the country and assaulted. Feist's wife went on the witness stand and accounted for every minute of her husband's time on the evening of the alleged assault, but the jury returned a verdict of guilty. A motion for a new trial was immediately made and defendant's counsel say the case will be fought through appellate courts.

Convention of Woman's Leagues.

The Convention of Woman's Leagues of Gettysburg College was held in Bruch Chapel last Thursday afternoon and evening and Friday morning. Seven leagues were represented in the convention, Chambersburg, Gettysburg, Harrisburg, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Shippensburg and York and those in attendance were enthusiastic in their expressions of organizing and working for the creation of new leagues throughout the territory that has always shown interest in Gettysburg College. It was believed that it should be possible to have thirty leagues in active operation before the convention of next year and this work toward the creation of new leagues will be vigorously pushed.

The adoption of the Constitution and by-laws was placed in the hands of the executive committee to be reported upon at the 1912 meeting. The funds raised during the past year were appropriated toward the support of Y. M. C. A. Secretary and registrar of the College.

At the meeting on Thursday evening three papers were read and discussed, by Mrs. Hanson of Pittsburgh on "The Aim of the College League," by Mrs. J. W. Richard of Gettysburg on "The Relation of the College League to the Board of Trustees" and by Dr. W. A. Granville on "The Importance of the College League."

Friday morning the following officers were elected: president, Mrs. Stuckenberg, Gettysburg; vice presidents, Mrs. J. F. Hartman, Philadelphia, and Mrs. Hanson, Pittsburgh; recording secretary, Mrs. George N. Lauffer, Newville; corresponding secretary Mrs. Charles F. Sanders, Gettysburg; treasurer, Mrs. McCreary, Indiana.

Me. Episcopal Church Reopening.

The Methodist Episcopal Church after undergoing repairs was reopened yesterday with a sermon by the pastor Rev. L. Dow Ott, and a statement of expenditures and raising of balance to cover indebtedness. The improvements consist of a new carpet in the auditorium; frescoing and recarpeting the Sunday school room; wood work repainted; and a number of things of a minor character. These improvements have added greatly to the comfort and beauty and attractiveness of the church. The cost of the improvements was $358.13. The amount collected by the pastor prior was $283.90, which left only $54.23 to be provided for. The $50.00 asked was raised in a few minutes. The pastor has been very active in bringing this about and considerable credit is due him for its economical management and successful completion.

As a Catholic she had always been a leader in church circles and was one of the best known members of St. Ignatius Church. She was a warm friend of Cardinal Gibbons and was known to many priests in this section of the country. As a member of the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution she was always in the forefront in patriotic movements both for the country at large and her native State. She was an honorary vice-president for life and the founder of the society in Maryland, being the first State regent and afterward regent for 10 years of the Baltimore Chapter. She was a native of Baltimore, and married Gen. Knott in 1873. When Gen. Knott was appointed Assistant Postmaster General by President Cleveland in 1885, Mrs. Knott proved herself a popular hostess in the Capital City. In the last few years she had retired, in a degree, from participation in social festivities. With her husband she was a frequent visitor to Gettysburg where his father and sister lived for a number of years.

KATHLEEN MAYBELLE WARREN. (Concluded on 5th page.)

McAllister Robbery.

On last Wednesday night one of the most outrageous and dastardly robberies was perpetrated at the old McAllister homestead at the old mill site on Rock Creek a mile and a half southeast of town.

The McAllister family is composed of Misses Martha and Agnes McAllister and their brother Samuel, who is very feeble being over 80 years of age. The two sisters were on the first floor of the house and about 8 o'clock there was a rap at the door and supposing it was a hunter, the door was opened and a man entered. He was without mask, of medium height, dressed in dark clothes and slouch hat. Closing the door he drew a revolver and warned them to keep quiet. He next pulled down the shades and blew out the light, out at the request of one of the women the lamp was relighted.

He commanded Miss Martha McAllister to sit down on a chair with her back to the wall and he tied her hands back of the chair. He grasped the wrist of Miss Agnes and ran a needle into her arm to help in terrorizing them. Finding that Miss Agnes would not be able to help him get the money he was after he released Miss Martha and commanded her to get him all the money in the house and threatened death if she failed. She first secured a purse in an adjoining room in which there was change of less than $1.00 but this was not satisfactory and he demanded more money with threats until she produced some paper money, handing over about $29, and when he left he threatened to return and kill them if they told any one during the night.

He was unknown to the Misses McAllister, but it is believed that it was some one who knew the family as he asked while there where old Sam was, meaning their brother, who was confined to his room upstairs in a very feeble condition. He was disposed to talk a little during his stay of an hour and a half. He remarked that his father and mother were in heaven and when one of the ladies suggested that he was not going on the right way to meet them, he replied he wasn't as bad as the present appearance of things would indicate. He claimed that he was hard up and would return the money in six or eight weeks as he wished to use it for a trip to St. Louis.

The robbery was reported next day and the authorities have been following out certain clues and suspicions. It was thought it might be a tramp as they are known to frequent the place, but remarks made by the man seemed to indicate an acquaintance with surroundings. It is said he had been drinking and had a flushed face and several upper teeth were missing.

Pittenturf Arrested.

Last Friday night James Pittenturf was landed in the county jail by County Detective Wilson and Chief of Police Shealer after being at large over three months since the commission of the crime with which he is charged. As Pittenturf has served two terms in the penitentiary, a third conviction on the present charge will make it possible to keep him in the penitentiary for thirty years.

On July 26 Hanson B. Haar of Table Rock, about 65 years of age, came to town and proceeded to spend at a lively pace $100. He was at the Globe Hotel during the evening and was in company with five men and exhibited his roll of money. Later in the night he was attacked, beaten and robbed in the hotel stable. Harry Bradley and "Bill" Thompson colored, and James Brady were arrested next day and are in jail on charge of being connected with the crime. James Pittenturf escaped with a fifth man, Susie Cook is in jail on charge of helping Pittenturf and the other man to escape.

Pittenturf after a narrow escape from apprehension, has been covering long distances, being as far as Mexico, it is said. The home country seems always to fatally beckon to the fugitive. He came to Gettysburg from Baltimore last Wednesday, getting off train near town. He came into town after dark and borrowing a bicycle rode to Taneytown the same night and next day shipped the wheel home from Bruceville.

Word came Friday afternoon that he had been located and Detective Wilson and Chief Shealer went to Taneytown in P. A. Miller's auto. After the Maryland authorities were assured that they would receive the entire reward the officers were taken to the home of an aunt of Pittenturf at Middleburg, about three miles from Taneytown. The arrest was made after a tussle with Pittenturf and an effort on his part to get away but finally was handcuffed. He was taken to Taneytown and turned over to the officers and brought to jail.

Model Apple Orchard—From Milk
to Millions—Standard of Living is What Costs.

A Model Apple Orchard.

An apple is the king of fruits; an apple tree is the home-fullest of trees. A house in the corner of an old orchard is the coziest in the country. I would not have it at the center, for I should then be compelled to tread on lots of fruit. All summer the winds and the sun pick off one and another apple and drop them for the boys and girls, or for cider. The apple tree in bloom is ideal; in fruit superb. There is nothing else like it anywhere in the world—nothing else half as beautiful. It says to us, "You and I can make a living; and we will do it without sacrifice of the beautiful; we will undertake to make, you and I, you folk and we trees, a model orchard and a model home"—E. P. Powell, in the November ORTING.

From Milk to Millions.

"Sudden riches, the transformation of milkmen into millionaires, the spectacular enrichment of individual apple growers in a few seasons," says Walter V. Woehleke, writing of the Inland Empire, Washington, in SUNSET MAGAZINE for November, "these are skyrockets that cause humanity to gaze at their blazing flights with admiration and envy. The dramatic element is strong in them, but contemplation of their fiery rise is of small profit to the toiling multitudes. The skyrocket leaves no path which the average man might travel except in an airship or by running the risk of a financial explosion at the start. But the trail of the plodder is plainly marked upon solid ground. It can be followed without leaving the earth. Take, for instance, the career of a poor Spokane milk man whose Bradstreet rating gradually, little by little, reached full seven figures. This man had no better start than a hundred others in the same business, but instead of taking up mining as a side line he devoted all his energy to the dairy. He studied every lactical possibility of the cow, introduced modern dairy methods, made his products a little better than those of his competitors and broadened out from year to year until his wares were a familiar byword in all the Northwest. The progress of his herd from its modest start to its present position is plain even to the dulllest eye, but travel along its trail is light.

Standard of Living is What Costs.

In the "Pilgrim's Scrip," in the November AMERICAN MAGAZINE, a contributor writes an analysis claiming that the cost of living has not gone up, but that the standard of living has increased. To prove it, he writes as follows:

"As a boy in the early '70's, I remember going to the store for my mother and paying nothing less than $1.00 per pound for tea. Flour was 6 or 7 cents per pound. Sugar 8 to 10 cents. Coffee 40 and 45 cents. A pair of high boots, such as I wore in the winter, cost $7.50 or $8.00, and to make them last they were copper-toed. My father was a country parson with never more than $1,000 per annum. I'm a free lance, earning from $2,500 to $4,000. 'Tis true, I'm no better off than was my father, but the fault is mine, not the cost of necessities. I pay 60 cents a pound for tea, 8 or 4 cents for flour, 5 to 7 cents for sugar, 29 to 35 cents for coffee, $3.50 to $4.00 for the boots without protectors. Then why is it so? Simply this, I have altered the whole plan of living as compared with my father's time, and instead of doing the thousand and one things personally which my parents did for themselves, I employ others to do them for me, and, of course, have to pay them. A dollar is not a unit of gold, but a unit of labor. Now, labor is dear in this country because it is scarce, and for no other reason.

Before You Buy That Farm.

W. H. Jenkins, a writer for the November number of SUBURBAN LIFE, gives a timely warning to city men who are thinking about going "back to the land." His article "Before You Buy That Farm," is based on wide experience both in actual farming, and on a thorough knowledge of agricultural conditions in the east. "About twenty-five in each one hundred of farmers," states Mr. Jenkins, "receive a labor income of 20 to 30 per cent on their investment, the other seventy-five receive from 5 to 10 per cent on their investment. The investment is usually from $5,000 to $10,000. Placing $8,000 as the average, the best farmers receive a salary of $2,400 for all the work done by the family, after paying interest on investment and all expenses. The class that make only 6 per cent receives a salary of $480."

Gen. Lee Carried the Whole Burden of the Last Two Years of the War

The student of the Civil War will be likely to reach the conclusion that for at least the last two years of the struggle General Robert E. Lee carried the fortunes of the Confederacy on his shoulders.

It will possibly always be a question how far Lee's military operations were affected by his relation to the Confederate Government, and to what extent he was interfered with by the Richmond authorities. That he was much hampered by them seems quite certain, both from the nature of his subordinate relation to Mr. Davis and from the interference which is continually disclosed in the correspondence that took place between them. Until Grant received command the Union generals were continually interfered with by the Washington Government, and it was only when Grant stipulated that he should be commander in fact as well as in title that success, after long delay, rewarded the Northern arms.

On the Southern side, though the interference was never so flagrant, and though Lee appears to have always had the confidence of President Davis, and, from the time when he assumed command of the Army of Northern Virginia, to have had that of the Confederate Government; yet it is a question whether the interference, or, what was equally disastrous, the lack of prompt, practical, and efficient support on the part of the government, was not in the end as fruitful of misfortune. Colonel Henderson, in his "Life of Stonewall Jackson," declares that "a true estimate of Lee's genius is impossible, for it can never be known to what extent his designs were thwarted by the Confederate Government."—From "General Lee and the Confederate Government," in the November SCRIBNER.

Sweet Butter Versus Salt.

Not only is much of our butter spoiled by careless and uncleanly making, and by mixing the old with the new and in other ways "renovating" it; but we permit its most delicate flavor to be spoiled by preparing it with sour cream and adding salt. Until a few years ago it was almost impossible, even in New York, to get sweet (unsalted) butter. Today it is served in the most expensive hotels and restaurants, some of the wealthy folk use it at home, and the general consumer has a chance to buy it in a few places, at fancy prices. It is seldom as good as the same product in the humblest French, German, Austrian, or Italian inn, or on the table of many peasants, yet it is a vast improvement on the unpalatable lubricator placed on most American tables, which I should no more think of eating than I should axle-grease. From Henry T. Finck's "Ungastronomic America" in the November CENTURY.

Autos for the Army.

Dashing down the avenue in Washington a squad of artillery army mules made a picturesque procession. A retired army officer who was looking on called attention to the fact, in a pathetic, remonstrant way, that in a few years the army mules would be no more.

"No more, I said," he fairly chuckled. "Those confounded autos are supplanting everything that has legs. They'll soon be having a cavalry squad of goggled cyclists and heavy artillery astride automobiles. There's no telling where this thing will stop."

"What a picture it would be to see a military parade, with the cavalry dashing by with a hook-hoek and the galling guns astride a red-devil racer, while the brass band was stowed away in a sight-seeing auto, trying to preserve the dignity of Bartrum's early processions. Then fancy the bespectacled orderlies scouting up and down the line—not on prancing chargers, no, sir—but in scooting airships, flying their signals amid the dazzling whirl of propellers.

"Yes," concluded the old veteran, tugging at his goatee, "you may as well go on and dream things, for you can't tell what will happen in these crazy days. Everyone's daft, sir, except my few old cronies, and even they're beginning to act strange."—"Affairs at Washington," Joe Mitchell Chapple in NATIONAL MAGAZINE for November.

Moving Pictures Used to Fight Disease and Ignorance.

Now that moving pictures have become so general, a tremendous movement is going forward toward the use of them to educate and uplift the people. The November WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION contains an interesting article along this line, a brief extract from which follows. The suggestion is that people everywhere urge moving-picture theaters to use educational films, a great variety of which are already on the market for managers to make use of.

"Pittsburg fights typhoid and tuberculosis with moving pictures. The health commissioner lectures in the public schools and in settlement houses, illustrating his talk with films. Charles S. Priest, M. D., health officer of Waterford, New York, could not afford to install a municipal picture-plant, so he induced the managers of local picture-theaters to let him show educational lantern slides or films to the audiences between the regular films programmed by the managers. In this way he has aroused public interest against the deadly house-fly, impure water and milk, and unsanitary methods of living which scatter the seeds of tuberculosis.

Scientifically Designed Kitchen.

The November "House Beautiful" presents a wealth of material and picture about houses. George E. Walsh writing of Scientifically Designed Kitchens says, "Until quite recently the kitchen received less attention from architects than almost any other part of the house, and their design followed conventional lines of the past or no lines at all, but were built in a haphazard way without much thought of convenience or suitability. We have erred in the past in both ways by building too small or too large kitchens. A revolt from the pantry like kitchens so common in apartments led to the other extreme—large, airy, over-sized kitchens. A little calculation of the number of steps a housewife must take to prepare the meals and serve them will show the chief objection to large kitchens. If the housewife prepared three meals a day or 1100 meals a year she will walk about 230 miles in doing this work if the distance from the range to the dining room table is 25 feet.

Thanksgiving Day Proclamation.

President Taft has issued his annual Thanksgiving proclamation, calling upon the citizens of the United States to observe Thursday, the 30th of November, next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer. The proclamation reads as follows:

"The people of this land having by long sanction and practice set apart toward the close of each passing year a day on which to cease from their labors and assemble for the purpose of giving praise to Him who is the author of the blessings they have enjoyed, it is my duty as chief executive to designate at this time the day for the fulfillment of this devout purpose.

"Our country has been signally favored in many ways. The round of the seasons has brought rich harvests. Our industries have thrived far beyond our domestic needs, the productions of our labor are daily finding enlarged markets abroad. We have been free from the curses of pestilence, of famine and of war. Our national councils have furthered the cause of peace in other lands and the spirit of benevolence has brought us into closer touch with other peoples, to the strengthening of the bonds of fellowship and good will that link us to our comrades in the universal brotherhood of nations. Strong in the sense of our own right and inspired by a strong sense of the rights of others we live in peace and harmony with the world. Rich in the priceless possession and abundant resources, wherewith the unstinted bounty of God has endowed us, we are unfeebly glad when other peoples pass onward to prosperity and peace. That the greatest privileges we enjoy may continue, and that each coming year may see our country more firmly established in the regard and esteem of our fellow nations, is the prayer that should arise in every thankful heart.

"Wherefore, I William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, designate Thursday, the thirtieth day of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and I earnestly call upon my countrymen and upon all that dwell under the flag of our beloved country, then to meet in their accustomed places of worship to join in offering praise to Almighty God and devout thanks for the loving mercies He has given to us."

Nepotism in Schools Abolished.

Dr. Nathan C. Schaeffer, state superintendent of public instruction, addressing school directors at a teachers' institute last week on the new school code remarked:

"There will be less eagerness in the future to become school directors, because nepotism in the election of teachers is virtually abolished. The father of a daughter who is budding into a school teacher had better be represented on the board by a reliable proxy."

Dr. Schaeffer was asked how many votes were required to elect a teacher under the new code.

"Three," he answered, "if the applicant has no relative on the board to advocate her cause; but if she has a relative on the board she must have four votes. When the board is composed of seven directors, the applicant needs but four votes to be elected, but if there is a relative in the bunch the applicant must have six votes.

"Every director of Pennsylvania will be ripped out of office on December 1," he remarked. "Is that part of the code constitutional? Undoubtedly because the term of the school director is not fixed by the constitution. It is fixed by statute, and any statute can be changed."

Dr. Schaeffer sounds a warning note and advises fathers who have daughters who want to be teachers, that "the father had better be represented on the board by a reliable proxy." This inhibition also takes in directors who have "first cousins," who desire to be enrolled as teachers.

Miss Mary Dream and her sister of near Biglerville, one night recently discovered several men trying to break into their house. They hurried to the telephone and the sound of the bell evidently changed the minds of the intruders.

The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach

A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgment.

This "Discovery" is a pure, glyceric extract of American medical roots, absolutely free from alcohol and all injurious, habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on its wrappers. It has no relationship with secret nostrums. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in all the schools of medicine. Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy of known composition. Ask your neighbors. They must know of many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

The House of Crony.

In front of the family of Crony Chancel boasts of a coat of arms. They say at the house of the Crony North took their family title deeds into the ark. At their chateau may be seen a picture of that event, wherein one of the drowning men waves a scroll above his head on which is inscribed, "Save the title deeds of the house of Crony."

The Artichoke.

The artichoke has nothing to do with art or the choking of it. The artichoke is an innocent vegetable known to the Arabians as the ardischanki, or earth thorn. The Jerusalem artichoke was never seen near Jerusalem. Its first name is a corruption of the Italian girasole, which means turning to the sun. It is a species of sunflower, bearing a tuber like that of a potato.

The Largest Domes.

Some of the largest domes in the world are: The Pantheon at Rome, 142 feet diameter, 143 high; baths of Caracalla, Rome, 112 feet diameter, 116 feet high; St. Sophia, Constantinople, 115 feet diameter, 201 feet high; St. Maria delle Fure, Florence, 139 diameter, 319 feet high; St. Peter's, Rome, 139 feet diameter, 330 feet high; St. Paul's, London, 112 feet diameter, 215 feet high.

The Monster.

"Miss Peachkin is very angry with young Slurkin."

"Why so?"

"She wrote him to return her letters, and he replied in a politely worded note that he would have his secretary sort them out at the earliest opportunity, his filing cabinet for love missives having been neglected while he was abroad."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Effect of Overeating.

The average dyspeptic does not give more than half an hour to his three meals, since all dyspeptics eat too fast. Therefore thousands of people are willing to suffer twenty-three and a half hours every day in order that they may do as they please for half an hour. And that's the way it goes in nearly everything else; that's the reason so many people are always being punished.—Atchison Globe.

In the Paper.

"Did ye bring the paper home, Silas?" asked Mrs. Winterbee.

"Ya-as," said Silas.

"Anything p'ticular in it this mornin'?" asked the lady.

"Ya-as," said the farmer. "Tew quarts o' peanuts and a bottle o' hoss liniment. Kinder 'bout you and I might have a little spree for supper."—Harper's Weekly.

A Scandal Spoiled.

"My husband didn't get home until 2 o'clock this morning," remarked the lady with the weary eyes.

"Indeed!" exclaimed the other lady, delightedly anticipating the narration of a family tiff. "And what did he say in explanation?"

"Nothing. I came home with him. We had been to a theater and to a late supper afterward."—London Answers.

Tired of It.

"What's your name?" the three other men asked him.

"John Potter," answered the stranger, who had accepted an invitation to take the fourth hand in a game of cards.

"That's all right. We'll call you"—"No, you don't! The first galoot that calls me Jack Potter will get the map of his face changed!"—Chicago Tribune.

What He Would Do.

"Always remember, boys," admonished the Sunday school teacher, "never harbor a spirit of revenge. Now, for example, John Thompson, if Arthur Smith struck you what should you do?"

"I'm 'im!" cried the indignant youngster. "Why, miss, if 'e attempted it I'd put his ears back an' make a runnin' dog of 'im!"—London Mail.

What She Should Do.

Bertie had been forbidden under severe penalties to play in the rain barrel, but the other day, said to relate, his mamma and grandmother found him splashing in it in high glee.

His mamma's face hardened, but the grandmother's kind heart led her to make a plea for the offender.

Bertie heard the plea, and when his mamma asked him sternly what she should do to a little boy who did not mind what was told him he answered promptly:

"I think you had better mind your mamma."

Lost His Bearings.

It was an English skipper of the olden time, who, having knowledge beyond the seeming needs, as he could read and use the charts, was dispatched to Rotterdam. The skipper had never been to Rotterdam before, so after getting over the bar and well away to the east he produced his charts and made a learned inspection, but the charts had been a long time in the locker and circumstances combined to alarm him extremely. He went up on deck and called to his mate, "Put her about; the rats have eaten Holland!"

PAY AS YOU GO.

To live within one's income is the secret of prosperity. Happiness is the heritage of the one who adheres to this rule, and a contented mind and an ever increasing bank account will belong to the one who buys only what he can pay for.

WOMAN SMOKER LIVED LONG

Mary Frith, Highway Robber, the First of Her Sex to Use Tobacco in England.

Mary Frith, better known as Molly Cutpurse, was a notable figure in old time London life. She had the reputation of being the first woman to smoke tobacco in England.

The length of her days is a disputed point, but it seems certain that she attained the age of over threescore years and ten. It is asserted that constant smoking prolonged her life. A portrait representing her in the act of smoking forms the frontispiece of Middleton's comedy of the "Roaring Girl." She also figures in other plays of the period.

Mary was the daughter of a shoemaker living in the Barbican, and Malone gives 1584 as the date of her birth. She early took to wicked ways and became a noted "highwayman." Among her familiar friends were the notorious Capt. Hind and Richard Hannam. She was an expert swordswoman. Single handed she robbed on Hounslow Heath. Gen. Fairfax of 200 gold Jacobuses, shooting him through the arm and killing two of his horses on which his servants were riding. For the offense she was committed to Newgate, but on paying the general £2,000 she obtained her liberty.

At one time Mary had £5,000 of her own, but by giving money to distressed cavaliers she died comparatively poor. Her death took place in July, 1659, and she was laid to rest in St. Bridget's.

ARE USED TO BEING CROWDED

Passengers on New York Street Car Sit Close Even When It Is Not Necessary.

The woman with a sense of humor smiled. "It is funny," said she, "how content some people are to sit jammed together in the cars."

"But they can't help themselves," protested her companion.

"I know, but I refer to the times when they are not obliged to occupy the same six inches with their next neighbors. When a crowded car begins to thin out, most people expand, but some forget to. I have seen the women who has been shopping squeeze into a seat beside a laborer at the rush hour, and just as often as not, she continues to tickle his nose with her plumes clear up to Harlem, after the car is half empty, and to rest her bundles on his lime-coated overalls.

"One night, quite late, away up-town on a Broadway car, a young man and young woman sat propped together midway of a long, empty seat. There was not another passenger left in that side of the car. They paid no attention to each other, and I supposed that they were too tired to talk. It was quite a shock to my calculations when the young man got off and left the girl sitting apathetically in the empty seat. I had estimated them as first cousins at the furthest."—New York Press.

One Way Out.

Uncle Mose, needing money, sold his pig to a wealthy northern lawyer who had just bought the neighboring plantation. After a time, needing more money, he stole the pig and resold it, this time to Judge Pickens, who lived "down the road a piece." Soon afterward the two gentlemen met and upon comparing notes suspected what had happened. They confronted Uncle Mose. The old dandy cheerfully admitted his guilt.

"Well," demanded Judge Pickens, "what are you going to do about it?" "Blessed ef I know, judge," replied Uncle Mose, with a broad grin. "I'm no lawyer. I reckon I'll have to let 'em two gentlemen settle it between 'yoselves."

An English Author Wrote:

"No shade, no sun, no fruit, no flowers, no leaves, November!" Many Americans would add no freedom from catarrh, which is so aggravated during this month that it becomes constantly troublesome. There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of the wasting diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula, completely cures catarrh, and taken in time prevents consumption. We cannot see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its radical and permanent cure. It is undoubtedly America's Greatest Medicine for America's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

Taft Looks for Defeat

President Taft in a speech at Chicago last week gave the following forecast of defeat:

"Now we are at—some people think—the crisis in the Republican party with reference to its continuance in the guidance of the nation," the president said. "I am hopeful that the good people of the country, who know a good thing when they see it, have only chastened us in an off year, in order that we may be better hereafter, not with no intention of shifting from shoulders that are fitted to bear the burdens of the present problems and carry them to a successful solution, to those which are untried and which have new theories of action that we do not believe in, and that we don't believe the people believe in."

"However, if so be that they desire to make a change, we shall loyally support the new government under any conditions with the hope it will insure to the benefit of the country, but with the consolation that, if after one trial the people think they ought to go back to the old party that has served them so well in the progressive days of the nation, they will do so—we can bear that, my friends; that is all."

Will of Henrietta M. Fickes Stands.

A complete exoneration of Mrs. Hattie M. Anstadt, of York, from the charge of influencing her aunt, Henrietta M. Fickes, in making her will in Mrs. Anstadt's favor, was given by Judge Wanner in an opinion filed last week refusing to award a jury trial to test the validity of the Fickes will. Miss Fickes died early in November, 1909, leaving a will in which she gave her entire estate to Mrs. Anstadt with the proviso: "She knowing full well my wishes and I having confidence that she will carry them out." After payment of debts and expenses of settlement the estate amounted to $3,094.3. Miss Fickes left to survive her neither father, mother, sisters nor children, but the following brothers: Himes C. Fickes, Warrensburg, Ill.; Howard C. Fickes, Owen, Wis.; Luther T. Fickes, Sterling, Col. After the will was probated these brothers started a contest alleging that Mrs. Anstadt had unduly influenced their sister and that the latter was of weakened mentality, so that the will did not represent her real desires as to the disposition of her property. Both these allegations are negatived by the court and unless an appeal should be taken to an appellate court, the will stands as written.

In the depositions read at the argument of the case, it was stated by Mrs. Anstadt that her aunt directed that each of her brothers was to be given $500 out of her estate, and that this provision for them, together with a direction to pay some bills and collect some money, was what the testatrix meant by the proviso put in her will.

Judge Wanner's opinion, in part, is as follows:

"Mental incapacity of the testatrix and alleged undue influence over her by the legatee, Mrs. Hattie M. Anstadt, are the grounds upon which we are asked to grant a jury trial to test the validity of the will of Henrietta M. Fickes. The testimony taken, however, fails entirely to show any such mental weakness on the part of the testatrix at or before the making of this will, as would affect it. On the contrary, the witnesses who have known her long and well pronounce her a woman of unusually strong and independent mentality. She had been a school teacher earlier in her life, for a period of from eight to ten years.

There is no direct evidence in the case of any coercion or even persuasion having been used by the legatee to procure the making of this will. Neither was she standing in any such close and confidential relationship to the testatrix as to justify any inference of undue influence on that ground. She had not lived with her nor had she kept her secluded or apart from her other acquaintances, nor had the will been drawn or executed secretly or in the presence of parties who were under the influence of this legatee.

"While at first blush this seemed to be an unusual case and one probably calling for fuller investigation, the suspicions at first growing out of the peculiarities of this will are fully set at rest by the evidence subsequently taken. The accountant (Mrs. Anstadt) has shown a proper settlement of the estate according to the instructions of the testatrix, and her counsel stated that she stands prepared to pay over the sum of $500 to each of the brothers or the decedent, according to her desire, as soon as this matter is finally disposed of."

Henrietta M. Fickes lived the greater part of her life in Scranton township, this county, where she was born and went to York several years before her death.

As to Presidency Next Year.

Woodrow Wilson declared last week with confidence that a progressive Democrat would be elected the next President of the United States.

"In the next election," said Governor Wilson, "the elector is going to vote for progressive ideas and a progressive candidate regardless of the party label."

"President Taft is almost sure to be renominated by the stalwart Republicans. That will mean that the Republican insurgents will vote the Democratic ticket. And that, of course means the election of the Democratic candidate, if he is a progressive."

"I have not advised fusion of the insurgent Republicans and the Democrats. I did say in my Madison address that the voters were not going to be bound by party ties at the next election, but would vote for their principles. That was not an advocacy of fusion."

"The insurgent or progressive movement originated in the West, but it has invaded Eastern strongholds. It has almost as much strength in the East now as it has in the West."

Mrs. THEODORE HOOPER, of Baltimore, died Friday, November 3, while undergoing an operation at St. Agnes Hospital, that city. She was a sister of Mrs. Norris Brock, of Hanover, and Mrs. William Formwalt, of Littlestown. She was a native of Uniontown, Md.

It is worthy of note that the five schools in the Meade building with a total enrollment of 198 had only six tardy marks.

THE RIGHT HOUSEA Man Who Was Taken For a Burglar

By ANNA B. CLARK

Jack Merton arrived in Chicago at 5 o'clock on a rainy afternoon. His train for the west left at 9, and he was prompted to spend the intervening hours with his cousin. Taking a cab, he was driven to the house.

"No. 232. There she is, the next one to this. I might have recognized the bronze flowerpots on the balcony anyway. Now for a surprise." He ran lightly up the steps of No. 232, pulled out a latchkey he had long carried and inserted it in the lock.

The key fitted easily, and the door swung open, revealing a long expanse of cool dark hall in summer attire of linen coverings. There was not a soul in sight. The doors that he remembered led to drawing rooms, library and sitting room were tightly closed.

At this hour Uncle Fred and Peter would probably have returned from the office and, as was their daily custom, would be grilling over the evening papers in the library in the glare of strong electric lights instead of spinning along the lake front watching the sunset after the strenuous day downtown. The Mertons were money grubbers, anyway, with but little eye for beauty. Nevertheless money grubbing had not affected the warmth of their big hearts, and this was unusual.

Jack strode down the hall, softly turned the knob of the library door and entered—to find himself in the mellow, subdued light of a solitary lamp on the writing desk. Out of the surrounding shadows a darker shape fitted and then came forward, revealing the straight, slim figure of a girl in a soft black gown, with a string of pearls around her white throat and dusky masses of hair framing the loveliest face Jack had ever seen—a face lighted by glorious hazel eyes and tinted with exquisite color.

The hazel eyes met Jack's fearlessly, and he was conscious of a quick movement of her right hand; then he found himself looking into the menacing barrel of a small revolver.

"What do you want here?" asked the girl quietly.

"Forgetful of his clandestine entrance, Mr. Merton drew himself up proudly. "Rather an original method of welcoming a guest," he said lightly.

"Rather an original method of paying a call," retorted the girl. "You see, I heard you enter the house."

"How did you know it was not Mr. Merton—or his son?" asked Jack, with amusement.

"Merton?" The girl lifted her fine black brows questioningly. "You have made a mistake; there are no Mertons here."

Jack stared. "Then I am in the wrong house. Isn't this No. 232?" he asked bluntly.

"Yes."

"My uncle has lived here for twenty-five years. Surely there can be no mistake. You see, I just came in from the east, and while waiting for western connections I ran up here to surprise them. Here is the latchkey I have carried for ten years past. It fitted the door, and so I came in, expecting to find my relatives here."

For answer the girl pushed a newspaper across the table and pointed at the large half tone portrait of a man occupying the center of the front page. It was evident that she had been reading the paper when he entered and had slipped into the shadow of a tall screen at the sound of his approaching steps down the hall.

Jack picked up the paper and carried it nearer the light. The girl still covering him with the little revolver. The young man uttered a slight exclamation and studied the picture and the surrounding text with amazed eyes and parted lips.

There before him was what might have been a portrait of himself, fair, keen face, handsome nose and fine eyes, with the careless toss of hair above. The black type underneath proclaimed this the picture of "Fussy Harry," the slickest gentleman burglar out of jail, and it was the purpose of the article to warn the public against his early arrival in Chicago—and to endeavor to place the gentleman burglar behind the bars as speedily as might be accomplished.

"You've been reading this?" asked Jack, rather breathlessly.

The girl nodded.

"I don't wonder you thought I might be—let me see—Fussy Harry! I'll confess that we look enough alike to be brothers—twins, in fact—but I'm not vain, you know, only have I got that raty look in my eyes?"

"I'd rather not say," returned the girl shortly. "You must understand that I'm not going to let you get away. The paper says you have committed murder—you are wanted for numerous burglaries and—"

"I suppose you intend to call up the police station and turn me over to the authorities. Well, do so! I can prove my identity, but not before I have been held up to suspicion. My name banded from one end of the ever ruined. Well, let 'er go!" said Mr. Merton recklessly.

He leaned against the wall, with folded arms, and surveyed the carpet gloomily.

"If you wouldn't mind sitting down so I can rest my elbow on the desk. It tires my arm holding this thing out so. Thank you," she said as Jack obediently sank into a chair.

"If you're going to call the police I hope you won't mind doing so at once, because if I can clear myself in time I want to catch the 9:30 western express."

"I have called them," hesitated the girl.

"How?"

"As soon as you came in I found the buzzer on the burglar alarm that connects with the police station and signaled. They should be here very soon." She was quite white now, and the hand that held the revolver trembled visibly.

"Is there a telephone in this room?" asked Jack presently.

"Yes," replied the girl.

"You wouldn't let me call up central and discover where my cousins, the Mertons, are? If I'm in the wrong house, why?"

"Is there any doubt about that?" Her face was slightly contemptuous.

"A good deal of doubt," asserted Jack boldly. "This room is as familiar to me as my own home. I've spent weeks here. I know every chair and table, for the Mertons are not given to changing their furniture. If you would take the trouble to look you might find a picture of me somewhere about the premises."

"I think not, except here." She laid her hand on the paper, with a provoking smile.

"Do you mean to tell me that this is not Mr. Fred Merton's house?" demanded Jack.

"Really, if it's any advantage for you to know, I wish I could tell you the name of the owner; only, you see, my friends have rented it furnished for the summer season, and I only arrived this morning, and I did not hear the name of the owner if it has been mentioned. And so it is possible that this is Mr. Merton's house. I daresay you are quite familiar with a good many houses."

"Let up on that!" growled Jack, quite out of temper. "No use hitting a fellow when he's down, you know."

"I beg your pardon," said the girl, her face coloring adorably, "but you must think me very mean. I've really been talking at random. I thought I heard a sound"—Her head was bent in a listening attitude.

"Burglars!" suggested Jack, with a grim smile. "Or what might be worse for me, police—ugh!"

A strained look came into the girl's face as footsteps advanced swiftly down the hall toward the door. She arose and leaned toward her captive.

"I'm sorry. I hope you'll come on all right. I wish it had not been I who had to—"

"Thanks," said Jack dryly. "I'll probably come out after I've served time! As in the case of the girl in the musical comedy song, you know, I must be captured by somebody, and it may as well be you." Well, here goes!"

There was the sound of voices outside the door—feminine voices—and then the door opened and skirts rustled silkily forward.

"Jean, you poor child, were you frightened to death staying all alone here. Merer, what's this? Oh, put down that pistol!"

Three young women, pretty as pictures, handsomely gowned, flattered toward the loveliest girl of all as she dropped the revolver to the desk. She arose and pointed a slim forefinger toward Jack Merton.

"That is Fussy Harry, wanted by the police. I have captured him!" She fainted away then, and it was Jack's privilege to gather her up and lay her on the leather couch before confronting the bevy of hysterical girls, who had fled to a distant corner.

"Um Jack Merton," began that gentleman with what dignity he could assume, "and I've been trying to persuade this young lady that—"

"Of course, it's Jack," cried the tallest girl, tossing back her veil. "It's Peter's cousin. Tell me what has happened."

Jack found his hands grasped by the welcoming hands of his cousin, Peter's bride, and he found no difficulty in convincing his listeners of his identity. The girl on the couch was recovering and sat up, listening to the conversation with flaming cheeks and sparkling eyes.

"We went to the matinee and left Jean alone. All the servants were out. She's been reading that lurid newspaper and—well, really Mr. Merton, it does look like you," explained Mrs. Fancher when Mrs. Peter had made the proper introductions. "I don't wonder Jean was frightened. But what pluck she had! Just fancy holding that revolver, and it is loaded, girls. No; there is no burglar alarm. What a fib, Jean! Of course she didn't know the name of Merton. We just met Mrs. Peter downtown and dragged her up. They're staying at the shore and"—So the explanations went on, and after a little while Jack found himself sitting down beside Jean, trying to make his peace with that disconcerted little lady.

"And so your home is in San Francisco?" he asked delightedly. "Why, that's where I'm going to live. I hadn't counted on such good luck—having a friend there, you know."

"I'm so sorry," faltered Jean, with a soft shyness in her tender eyes.

"I'm not," asserted Jack, "and I'm sure you would have captured me sooner or later. You'll find me the most willing victim." And the look in her eyes satisfied Jack that he had entered the right house after all.

The harp, which was suggested by the lute, is ascribed to Jubal, 3875 B. C., and was King David's favorite instrument. Rural Carrier Brings Suit.

Joseph W. Shutt, a former Adams county school teacher, through his attorney, Herman Berg, Jr., of Carlisle, has entered suit in Cumberland county against Mrs. James I. Chamberlin, of Harrisburg, asking damages in the sum of $2,500 for injuries received in an auto accident. In his statement Shutt, who is a rural mail carrier on Route 8, Carlisle, avers that about six weeks ago while in the delivery of his mail, he was passing through a narrow place in the road and coming in the rear of his carriage was the Chamberlin automobile. It was too narrow for the mail carrier to get out of the way of the machine, and the auto was driven into his wagon, breaking the vehicle and throwing Shutt out.

An Accidental Shooting.

Mrs. Wm. Stover of Menallen township was accidentally wounded on last Wednesday afternoon by bullet from revolver in hands of her niece Miss Esther Williams at her home on High Street. The bullet struck Mrs. Stover on right cheek, the bone stopping course of bullet, making a painful but not a serious wound.

Miss Williams had used the revolver on Halloween, her father Max Williams having removed the cartridges. When she brought it back later in evening the father had reloaded the revolver unknown to his daughter, intending to take it with him on a hunting trip next morning. It was placed on the dining room buffet and forgotten in the morning when he went away.

During the afternoon Mrs. Stover arrived and a frolic followed and Miss Williams in a spirit of play picked up the revolver which she did not know had been reloaded and pointed it at her aunt. The gun went off, Mrs. Stover being injured as described. A physician was summoned at once who dressed the wound and gave assurance that the wound was not a serious one.

Forest Fire at Pen Mar.

A forest fire three miles in length raged on the Blue Ridge Mountains between High Rock, the highest point above Pen-Mar, and Edgemont, last week. The fire was confined to an almost inaccessible portion of the mountains by reason of the rocky formation and the force of the firefighters could only work along the outskirts of the fire-swept region, which is covered with heavy timber and a dense underbrush. There was a deep covering of leaves on the ground that added additional fuel to the flames.

The fire, when discovered Wednesday evening was small, and no efforts were made to extinguish it. Heavy winds caused the flames to spread and gain such headway that the fire became of dangerous proportions. Residents were alarmed and went to work to protect their homes.

The fire was confined principally to the west side of the mountain, reaching to the summit near High Rock. It is supposed that the fire was started by hunters and from present indications serious damage will be done. The fire could be seen for many miles at night.
